"Between the Mountains and the Sea"

A Review of the Year
at Lynden High School

PUBLISHED BY THE Associated Student Body
OF LYNDEN HIGH SCHOOL

Why we Dedicate:

For remarkable service to Lynden High
School far beyond requirements,

For challenging student abilities,

For dynamic direction of school productions,

For making growing pains interesting,

For impressively being what she is—

We students dedicate our efforts to

EDNA M. FISHER

BETWEEN the Mountains and the Sea, in the orderly community of Lynden, stands the Lynden Public High School. From this building, over two generations of citizens have been graduated. It is larger now than it was many years ago, and the traditions and standards have grown with each new addition. Many of us will settle in other distant places, but the guiding influences which we received here will remain as the enduring factor of our lives.

BETWEEN the Mountains and the Sea—here the Class of '51 meets a challenge. In this strip of coastal plain where pioneers constructed a community from the fierce wilderness, these graduates face a similar task. While the range is extended and the problem more perplexing, the challenge is the same—to strengthen the community.

Highlights of the Senior Year

These seniors made possible an operation for one of their classmates rather than buying class rings for themselves.

At the opening of this school term they sponsored an all school mixer for the purpose of acquainting the new and younger members of the school with the older students.

One of their first activities was a pie social. A businessmen's lunch was held early in March as a means of raising essential funds. The Seniors spent several evenings together after pot-luck suppers. In April at the annual Senior Parent's night, they entertained their parents with an imaginary bus tour. The theme of the program centered on a proposed trip for the class.

Reverend Calhoun of Bellingham delivered a baccalaureate address on the evening of May 27. Graduation was held the following Tuesday, May 29.

This class may be commended on its many lunches, dinners, picnics and informal gatherings. They have probably had more enjoyment as a group than any previous Senior class.

BETWEEN the Mountains and the Sea, conditions favor industry. From the high slopes of the mountains minerals, rich ores and building stone are extracted. The forests supply the products of wood. Out of the sea comes a wealth of marine life. Centrally located between these important features is Lynden, where the basis of industry is the land.

The Underclassmen at Lynden High carry the industrial load. Governing the affairs of the ASB is big business. The production of the Simba, the Lion's Tale, athletic events and school programs relies upon them. The success of the school is in their hands.

BETWEEN the Mountains and the Sea, strong leadership was required to develop this fertile valley. In the short span made memorable by this year's jubilee celebration, Lynden has been a rapidly improving area. The high school faculty and administration guide the way. We pick our high school leaders with care, for upon them depends the success of student enterprise.

BETWEEN the Mountains and the Sea, courses the River Nooksack, from the heights of the Cascades to the low flats of Puget Sound. To the natives and early settlers, it was a highway and a larder. Today it furnishes myriads of fish and, at Nooksack Falls, transfers its energy to useful electricity. The life of a River is a life of service. At Lynden High are many clubs and organizations which serve school and community. They add comfort and efficiency to school activities.

Here are six students whose service to the school has been recognized and commended. They are the presidents of service clubs.

Basketball Review

The Lynden Lions, Under Coach Roosevelt Bergman, came through with a very successful season, taking the county championship with-out a loss. The Lions had a 17-1 record going into the District Tournament at Mount Vernon. There, the Lions dropped two games which disqualified them from the State Play-Offs. Ron Bennink, last year's county scoring champ, came through again this year with 199 points, bettering his previous mark by 60 points. Bennink and De Boer were given berths on the All District Team. Bennink, was also chosen on the All State Team.

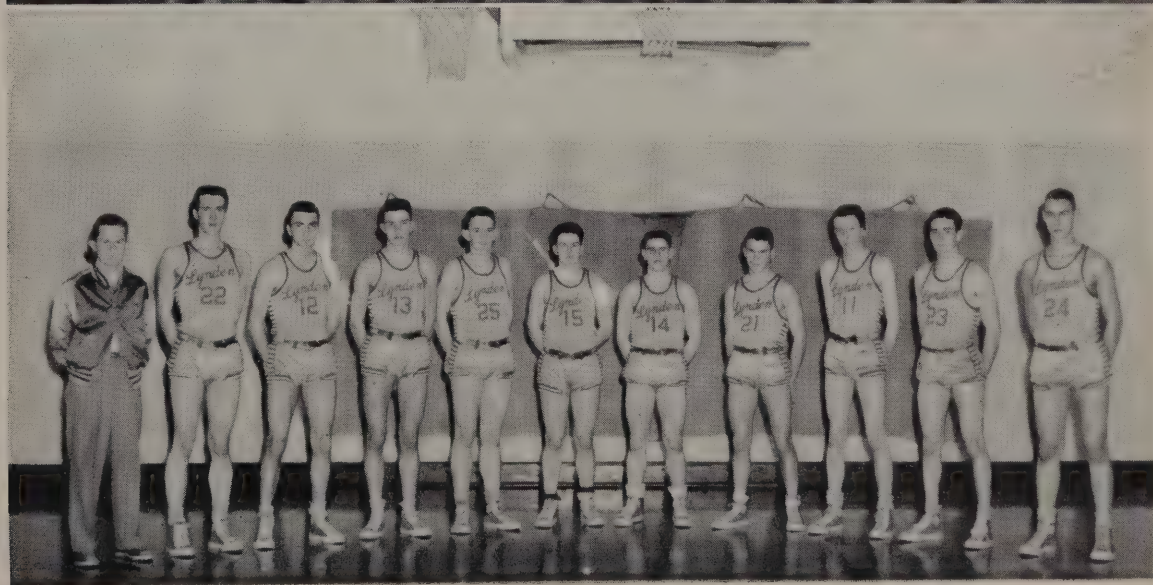

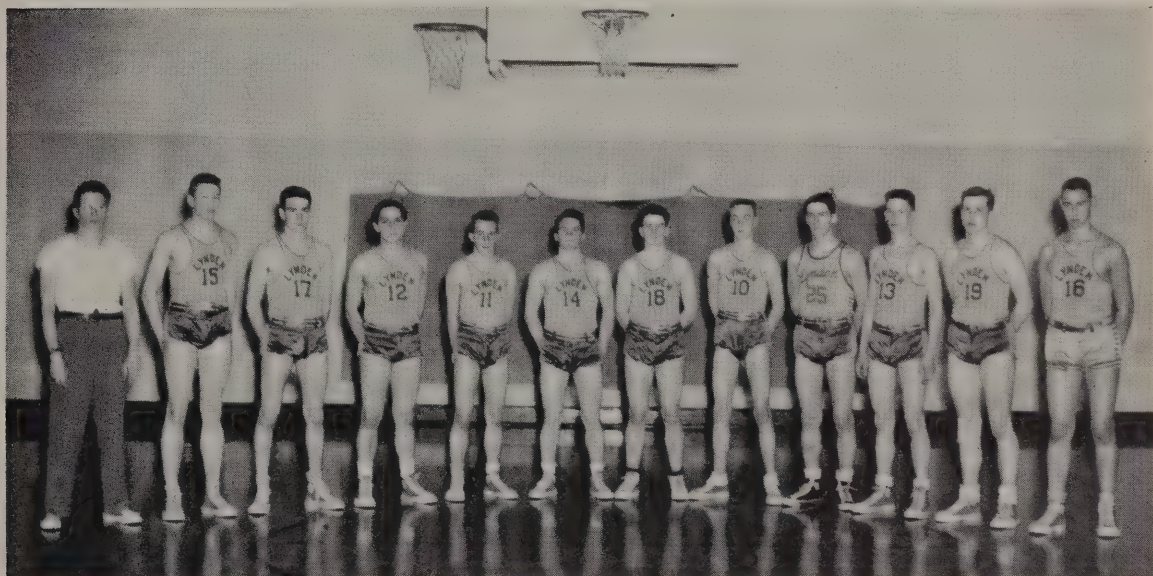

Losing six seniors, Bennink, De Boer, Assink, Muenscher, Young and Taubenheim will increase the difficulty of matching such a record next year. There are high hopes they will, however, and to next year's team we say, "The Best of Luck."
